Research Papers and Reports

China and International Development: Challenges and Opportunities

(IDS Bulletin 45.4, Editors: Gu Jing, Zhang Xiulan, Gerry Bloom and Li Xiaoyun)

This IDS Bulletin focuses on China's development strategy and its own development experience, its increasing involvement in development activities in low- and middle-income countries, as well as its collaboration with OECD-DAC members in international development, and its growing engagement in global governance structures.

Articles contribute valuable expertise and insight from both Chinese and non-Chinese perspectives, to map the shifting landscape of China's engagement in global development, and contribute to mutual understanding between traditional donors and rising powers in development cooperation. The aim of this issue is to contribute to dialogue between decision-makers, policy analysts and researchers in China, the UK and other countries, about strategies for supporting development.
